Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

Women are called the weaker sex, but they can put a cap on a fruit jar so tight you can't get it off.

The professor of logic told his class: "Last year, people bought ten million quarter-inch drills. Why?" A smart pupil replied: "Obviously they wanted quarter-inch drills."

"No, not at all—they wanted quarter-inch holes."

The hollyhocks by the concrete post in front of Mrs. Kelly's chicken place are dark red.

Smoke trees are in full bloom around town. There is a big one on South Sixth street just off Poplar, another on North Twelfth just south of Olive.

The blooms look like big puffs of smoke.

Here is a list of words which end in "ous". This is supposed to be the complete list. If you find another just let us know.

ambitious, arduous, assiduous, conspicuous, contemptuous, contiguous, continuous, deciduous, fabulous, fluctuous, fructuous, impetuous, insectuous, incontinentuous, ingenuous, innocuous, insidious, mellifluous, perspicuous, presumptuous, promiscuous, simious, sumptuous, superfluous, tempestuous, tenuous, tortuous, tortuous, vicuous, virtuous, voluptuous.

Courting is the only sport where the animal that gets caught has to buy the license.

The fourth governor of Kentucky was Christopher Greenup. He was elected in 1804, was a soldier, Virginian, and one of the first two Kentucky representatives in Congress after Kentucky became a state.

The average woman in the United States uses a dozen pairs of nylon a year. We thought it was about fifty.

Women are odd. They wear what they wear according to the mood they are in.

If they feel good then they will wear something colorful or stylish.

If they are depressed they will wear something plain and without any frills. If their mood changes before they leave home, they will change clothes.

If their underthings are torn, stretched or what have you, they are miserable even though they look ok from the outside. What if I'm taken to the hospital or something, etc.

If they go to a banquet and tear their hose on the table, the meal is ruined, no matter how delicious.

Getting dressed is an ordeal. Everything must match, contrast, or harmonize. Even the eye shadow.

Hair is a problem all by itself. If the coiffure is fixed on the day of the event it is too frizzy, so it has to be done the day before. Then comes the problem of how to sleep with it the night before the event.

This is accomplished by all matter of contraptions. Tissue is put all way round the head, then a huge net goes over this. Then down of pins fixes everything in place. Then she lies down to sleep with the principal idea not to ruin the hairdo.

We don't know how they do it but they turn up as visions of loveliness at the appointed place and time.

Struck On Forehead With Claw Hammer

Apparently no fracture was sustained in the accident, however a bad cut resulted from the blow. McKinney was given first aid and returned to his job later.

Montgomery Makes Attack On Eisenhower

LONDON (AP) — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery used today's 20th anniversary commemoration of D-Day to launch a new and bitter attack on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the man he followed to victory in Europe.

Montgomery stunned a British television audience of millions Friday night by assailing Eisenhower's concept of the Normandy campaign as "muddled" and "unsound."

Marshall of the Royal Air Force Lord Tedder, Eisenhower's No. 2 man during the Normandy thrust, said Montgomery's remarks were "a pitiful example of a man's second childhood."

Tedder said Eisenhower's strategy was never seriously questioned. "Of course there were the usual differences of opinion, as there always are in cases like this."

Tedder said, "The statements made about this by Viscount Montgomery tonight were just pitiful."

Montgomery, as irascible now as when he was in command of Allied ground forces during the invasion, said the campaign "was British and it succeeded because of first class teamwork" among British, American and Canadian forces.

"I do not believe that Eisenhower ever really understood the strategy of the Normandy campaign. He seemed to me to get the whole thing muddled up," Montgomery said in a taped interview.

"The unsound and muddled statements which were made later by Eisenhower were utterly monstrous. They gave the impression that the British forces... failed and that the American forces had to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for them, which of course was not the case."

"The end to play down the fact that the invasion of Normandy was a great Allied effort."

Montgomery has made substantially the same charges before. Britain's belief is that Eisenhower was too cautious and should have moved ahead more quickly.

Former Nazi Is Found In Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The capture of fugitive ex-Nazi Dr. Josef Mengele, widely sought for alleged war crimes at the Auschwitz death camp, was announced today by the Peruvian government.

Mengele was arrested at a jungle settlement in San Martin Province about 400 miles north of Lima. It was not known how soon he would be brought to the capital.

Informed sources said Mengele, 63, was operating a prosperous agricultural business in the settlement of Tumbao at the time of his arrest by Peruvian police.

Israeli agents had sought Mengele in South America for several years, at one time concentrating their activities in Brazil.

The former Nazi SS elite guard doctor is currently wanted in Germany in connection with the trial in Frankfurt of former officials at the Nazi's World War II extermination camp in Poland.

Mengele's name has come up often in testimony in the trial. Former Auschwitz inmates—who knew him as "the angel of death"—have accused him of presiding over the massive Gestapo "medical experiments" on women and children, and of perfecting the use of gas chambers for mass killings.

Dental Profession Loses To Politics At State Level

By CAROLE MARTIN
United Press International
FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The dental profession lost a bright young man to politics recently.

David Schwartz, 29, just out of high school and headed for a career in dentistry, volunteered to help out during Lt. Gov. Wilson W. Wyatt's unsuccessful campaign for the U.S. Senate.

It was just natural after Wyatt's defeat in 1962, that the Louisville youth should continue to do his best on behalf of Edward T. Breathitt, and he became one of the hardest workers at the "Breathitt for Governor" state headquarters.

This summer David is working as an aide to Don Mills, the governor's news secretary who is also a veteran of the Wyatt campaign.

In the fall, David will return to the University of Kentucky where he is majoring — naturally — in political science.

Another summer employee on the governor's staff is Linda Allen, 21, daughter of state Rep. Paul Allen, D-Barren. An English major at UK, Linda is helping out with secretarial duties.

Gov. Breathitt is hoping that he will be able to attend the American Folk Festival, being held this year at the new Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheater June 14.

One person who definitely intends to attend is former Gov. Bert Combs, for whom that particular state park holds a special meaning. Built during his administration, it is located near his old hometown of Prestonsburg.

The governor's annual seminar for members of Kentucky's newspaper, television and radio professions will be held here next month at a date to be announced shortly.

Five New Airports To Open In State

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — State Aeronautics Commissioner Philip Swift has announced bids on five new airport projects, to cost a total of more than $500,000, will be opened this month.

The projects include construction of new airports at West Liberty, Mount Sterling and Whitesburg, which will raise the total constructed with state aid during the last four years to 12.

A new pavement will be laid at the Morehead Airport and the Mayfield airstrip will be repaved.

Swift said the state is contributing $142,584 to the projects which represent allocations during the past 12 months.

Swift also announced that the state tentatively has allocated $40,000 for airport construction at Russellville and $25,000 for Dawson Springs which will have to be matched by local funds.

The Jamestown — Russell Springs Airport is nearing completion, Swift added.

Mets Stadium Is A Chamber Of Horrors For Pennant Hopefuls

By FRED DOWN

New York's 125-million Shea Stadium may be a Taj Mahal to the ber of horrors.

Former Artist On Trapeze Is Now Couturier

By GAY FAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Mayme Ward
used to be the daring young girl on the flying trapeze. When the passing years grounded her, however, she didn't quit the circus life.

Today, Mrs. Edward Ward at 59 is couturier to circus animals, most notably to elephants.

"Elephants are like people in a way," said the Baraboo, Wis., seamstress. "They realize when they're dressed up and seem quite pleased.
They're hams. Horses don't much care. But ponies love to be decked out."

What's new in elephant styles?
Their "skirts" just knee length, said
Mrs. Ward. Actually, she explained, if they were any longer there'd be the hazard of an elephantine trip
on the hem.

Big Costuming Job
Mrs. Ward, blue-eyed with graying hair, is just completing the ponderous task of costuming, or blanketing, 10 elephants and 44 horses. The animals will be part of the second annual street circus
parade held July 4, in Milwaukee.

The event, which last year drew nearly 750,000 people, is underwritten by the Schlitz Brewing Co.

Mrs. Ward took on the costuming assignment at the request of C. P.
Fox, director of the Circus World
Museum, which stages the parade.

The museum is at Baraboo, about 125 miles north of Milwaukee, it was here in 1884 that Ringling Bros. founded its circus and wintered for 34 years.

Mrs. Ward, born in Oshkosh, Wis., joined the circus as a child when her mother died and her father sent her to live with a cousin who was married to an acrobat in the now-defunct Van Amburg Circus.

She went immediately into apprenticeship wire-walking, acrobatics and trapeze.

Joins Act
At 17, working for Ringling, she met and married Ward who had a featured trapeze act with his sister.
Adopting double harness and double trapeze at the same time, Mrs.
Ward joined the act which eventually was billed as "The Flying Wards."

The Wards had two sons and a daughter—the sons still leading the circus life, the daughter giving it up to rear a family. Mrs. Ward's husband died in 1928.

She quit the high wires in 1947
when her second son, Harold, urged her to.

"He bawled me out," she recalled. "Mom," he said, "who wants to see an old thing like you up there in lights? Get down."

She did—at the age of 52.

CITIES SOUTH VIET NAM SAFETY—USAF Secretary Eugene
Zuckert chats with House Armed Services Committee Chair-

"obsolete and outmoded" planes used in South Viet Nam have a better safety record than modern jet fighters being flown in the United States.

Beat The White Sox In Seven Innings Or Just Forget It

By FRED DOWN
United Press International

The word around the American League is to beat the Chicago White Sox in seven innings or forget it.
The seventh inning has been known as the "lucky seventh" for years but for 1964 opponents of the White Sox it's the unlucky frame
when star relief pitchers Hoyt Wilhelm and Don Mossi make their appearances.

Either one is usually capable of quieting whatever disturbance is brewing but if one isn't equal to the task manager Al Lopez quickly signals to the bullpen and the other game-ender appears.

Some idea of how effective they've been is demonstrated by pitching statistics that show Wilhelm has relieved in 21 games and has a 1.50 earned run average while Mossi has appeared in 13 games and has a 2.68 ERA.

The White Sox moved back into first place in the American League as a result of a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Friday night and once again it was the star relief combination that wrapped up the win.

First, Wilhelm quelled a seventh-inning Detroit rally and then Mossi came onto the scene in the ninth to retire Al Kaline with the winning run on base.

Juan Pizarro, who singled home
a run in the second inning and went 9 1/2 innings on the mound, received credit for his sixth victory against two losses. The win was the third straight for the White Sox while the loss was the sixth in a row for the Tigers.

The Minnesota Twins knocked the Baltimore Orioles out of first place with an 11-5 triumph, the Washington Senators beat the Cleveland Indians, 5-3, the Boston Red Sox
outslugged the Kansas City Athletics, 14-7, and the Los Angeles
Yankees.

Leo Clinton, appearing with the Angels for the first time since being traded from Boston, tied the score with a two-run homer in the third inning and Jim Fregosi produced the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the sixth. Bo Belinsky received credit for his third win, aided by Bob Lee's late-inning relief, while Ralph Terry suffered his fifth setback against one victory for the Yankees.

Angels defeated the New York Yankees, 3-2, in other AL action.

In the National League, Cincinnati nipped St. Louis, 8-4. New York routed Los Angeles, 8-0. Milwaukee defeated Chicago, 5-2. San Francisco topped Philadelphia, 5-3, and Pittsburgh shaded Houston, 4-3.

Zoilo Versalles hit two homers, Jimmie Hall belted his 12th of the season and Rich Rollins and Bob Almon hit triples as the Twin unleashed a 13-hit attack that snapped the Orioles' six-game winning streak. Lee Stange yielded nine hits, including homers by Brooks Robinson, Jackie Brandt and Boog Powell, but went the distance for his second
win.

Buster Narum went seven innings
to earn his fifth victory of the season with the relief help of Jim Duckworth as the Senators felled Petro Tamos' bid to score the 100th win of his big league career. Bill
Almon hit triples as the Twin King hit a two run homer for the Senators while Vic Davallia homered for the Indians.

Dick Stuart's grand slam homer featured a nine-run second-inning Red Sox rally that paved the way for Earl Wilson to win his fourth game. Earl Thomas, playing his first game for the Red Sox since being acquired from the Angels, homered
while Ed Charles, George Alaisk and Rocky Colavito connected for the Athletics.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 397 Bungling of the raid aimed at Richmond, Feb. 29-March 4, 1864, which he himself had proposed and did not result in the sidelining of Judson Kilpatrick (l.). The war in 1861-65 was one in which generals (on both sides)
were allowed to make large scale mistakes
again and again.

The cost of the New Jerseyman's badly planned, misdirected operation was 340 men (of a 3,584-man force); nearly a thousand horses, killed or made unfit for further service; over a thousand firearms and ammunition.

Sherman, who was commandant of a military academy in Louisiana when the Rebellion began, knew from coping with Southern young blades how to handle a daring, vainglorious officer who bore a marked resemblance physically and in character to George Custer, Kilpatrick's classmate at West Point (1861). Under Sherman, Kilpatrick did not make another mistake of the magnitude of those he had committed at Gettysburg and in the Richmond raid. Promoted to major general, he continued as Sherman's cavalry commander during the reduction of Atlanta, march to the sea, and decisive Carolinas campaign.

Nevertheless, his nickname, "Kill Cavalry," retained a double meaning: a driving, fighting leadership in the field, and conspicuously loose conduct in bivouacs that set a demoralizing and debilitating example for many of the younger, more impressionable men in his command. "The best disciplin-arians among his subordinates could only mitigate its influence," a biographer wrote.

CHAPTER 17
BERT HAGGERTY and I found Earl Hoffman on the roof of the Delaney Apartments, six stories up, poking around the vacant penthouse with a revolver in his hand. He was fully clothed in a blue suit, but the orange cuffs of his pajama legs hung down over his shoes. His damaged face was ghastly in the sunlight.
I walked toward him, pushing my aquat shadow ahead of me across the gravel surface. Haggerty tagged along behind. He was afraid of Hoffman. So was I.
"Hello," the old man said to me. "I need some reinforcement. I can't find any witnesses, and now they tell me that my daughter's been killed. Everything's gone to hell in a handkerchief."
"I'm sorry, Earl. May I look at that gun? It may be evidence."
His eyes were deeply puzzled. He knew that I was talking nonsense, as he knew that he was acting suspiciously. But he wouldn't admit it, even to him- self. "You can't have my gun. The killer may be armed."
I stepped in close and took it away from him. Hoffman began to sob. His voice rose and fell like the wind.
"Delaney never touched her. He went for the older stuff. She was a clean girl, too, a good little daddy's girl." His voice broke. "What happened to her?"
He was silent. Then with a scream he fell on his side. The thud shook the roof. I tried to help him up.
"Keep away from me. There's spiders on me."
"I don't see any spiders."
"They're under my clothes. Black widows. The killer's trying to poison me with spiders."
"Who is the killer, Earl?"
His face worked. "Never found out who put the chill on Delaney. Word came down from the top, close off the case. What was a man—?" Another scream issued from his throat. "There's hundreds of 'em crawling on me!"
He tore at his clothes. They were in blue and orange rags when the police arrived, and his old wrestler's body was naked and writhing on the gravel.
The two patrolmen knew Earl Hoffman. Haggerty and I didn't even have to explain.
I talked with Bert Haggerty briefly before I left the city. He was in my rented car on Hoffman's dingy street, and he told me how he had met Helen. She had run away from home when
